David Wright - Baseball Workouts Summary

David Wright is truly one of one of the best players in the big leagues. The basis for this is not merely his capability and presence on the diamond, but also his work ethic. Not like numerous big league players he does not take his ability for granted and works hard to improve every single day.

"I always knew that I had to outwork my competition because I'm not a guy that has the best tools and the best skills so I really have to rely on my own hard work" Wright said during an interview for Stack.com. This statement genuinely exhibits the honesty and work ethic of David because he can admit that he's not naturally great at baseball, but since he loved the game he worked hard until he was great.

In the article about David Wright on Stack.com he explains how he would work together with the scheduling people at his high school to make sure that he could take some additional batting practice before games. While that's not necessarily feasible for most people, it displays what length he would go through to get additional practice.

One more great thing about David is his dedication to his community. Not only has he created The David Wright Foundation, but he additionally participates in regular interviews and video interviews where he showcases some of the baseball workouts he does to improve. Although many of these can be seen on Stack.com, by simply performing a simple search on YouTube you can find a lot of others.

Even though the Mets are struggling currently, David Wright's career is as bright as ever. He really realizes how to work hard and make the most of his baseball workouts! Yet another thing about David Wright is his honesty and integrity as a baseball player. While we're in the steroid era of baseball, David has yet to be suspected of using performance-enhancing drugs. David Wright is genuinely a good role model for young athletes in addition to being a terrific player.
