Football has long been a staple sport of America. It rivals baseball for popularity and some would argue that it is making a bid to claim the title of America's pastime. Battling for the pigskin taps into primal ferocity and the spirit of completion with intensity unseen in many other sports. Florida has a rich heritage on the gridiron at all levels and its powerhouse teams inspire fans from all over the country.

Some of the Sunshine State's most recognizable teams are Miami University and Florida State. These NCAA titans are nationwide icons and they do not comfortably share the limelight. Their bid for dominance over each other culminates in an annually visited inner state rivalry between the Hurricanes and the Seminoles.

One rivalry just isn't adequate for either one team and there are many clashes in and out of conference that get fans roaring in the stands as well as at home. Whether they are playing the other or some of their alternative rivalry, Seminole and Hurricane lovers travel from all across the state as well as other regions to watch their boys in action.

College is not the only spot to observe the finest football. Sunshine State high schools are notable for developing a number of the fiercest athletes in their level and some of the best recruits going into college. Their state high school championships of all divisions highlight some of the most impressive teams within the country, many rivaling a variety of college teams around.

Florida's football domination extends all the way for the NFL with the Miami Dolphins. The Dolphins enjoy an ardent fan base from coast to coast and so they can't ever be discounted for world-class rivalry. The Dolphins have been home to such NFL celebrities as Dan Marino, Don Shula, and Nick Saban.
